The Courant

of 1937

Edited by the Students of Chelmsford High School

Foreword

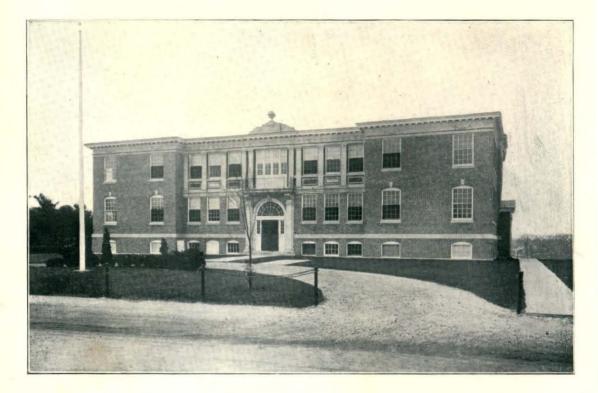

All of us are destined to climb the ladder of life. Some will ascend to more distant rungs than others. None will be able to turn about and descend once more the passing steps of youth, but the chance remains for us to gaze at school day memories in the semblance of this book.

As the members of the Class of 1937 advance to the successes of their chosen fields, may they always recall with affection the joys, trials, and friends of their youth!

Chelmsford High School

"From rich and poor, from high and low, Each year they crowd each room and hall— Young lives whose future none can know Save Him Who marks the sparrow's fall.

'Tis Education's cherished end To aid each youth his place to find, That head and hand and heart may blend In useful service to mankind.''

MORRIS L. BUDNICK

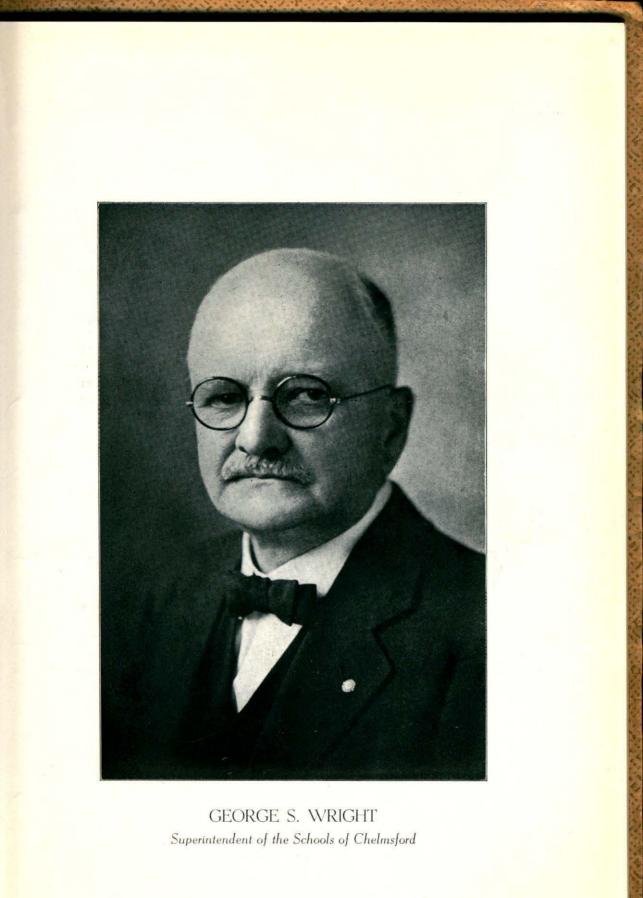

Whose earnest efforts and splendid gift for organization made our Athletic Association the success that it is and his classes a pleasure to attend.

To the Students of Chelmsford High School:

Many students at this time are choosing subjects or courses for next year. Whether to take French or geometry, chemistry or economics, a college preparatory course or the commercial are questions of the day. Students who intend to go to college have little freedom of choice, for they must plan their work by entrance requirements from the first year in high school, but others each year may weigh the comparative merits of the subjects offered and should choose as wisely as they can what appears to be most valuable for them.

Strange as it may seem, the various subjects offered do not differ in intrinsic value. It is not the subject taken which matters, but the way in which the student takes the subject. If he has to be driven to do his work and is content with merely getting by, then the value of the subject is almost nil. If, on the other hand, he becomes so engrossed in his work that neither time nor effort counts in his determination to do the task well, then he is getting maximum benefit from that subject, whatever it may be. Subjects and courses are of little importance when compared with the spirit in which they are pursued. May each student in Chelmsford High School choose subjects wisely, to the end that he strives willingly and earnestly to master them.

-GEORGE S. WRIGHT, Superintendent of Schools

To the girls and boys of Chelmsford High School:

This spring we heard that we must serve humanity or our services would eventually not be needed. Also, in choosing a vocation we were informed that only those institutions that are making the world a better place to live in are permanent. We may very easily conclude that service and not material reward should be given first consideration in deciding what we shall select for our life work. We should not be deceived by a fickle populace demanding the sensational. This demand is of a comparatively short time, which leaves the performer stranded with nothing to do and, unless a careful handling of finances has been practiced, with no funds to live on. On the other hand the so called public service jobs are not sensational and they do not pay as high salaries, but they are of a much longer duration, furnishing the public servant with a means of being useful as well as earning a living, for a life time.

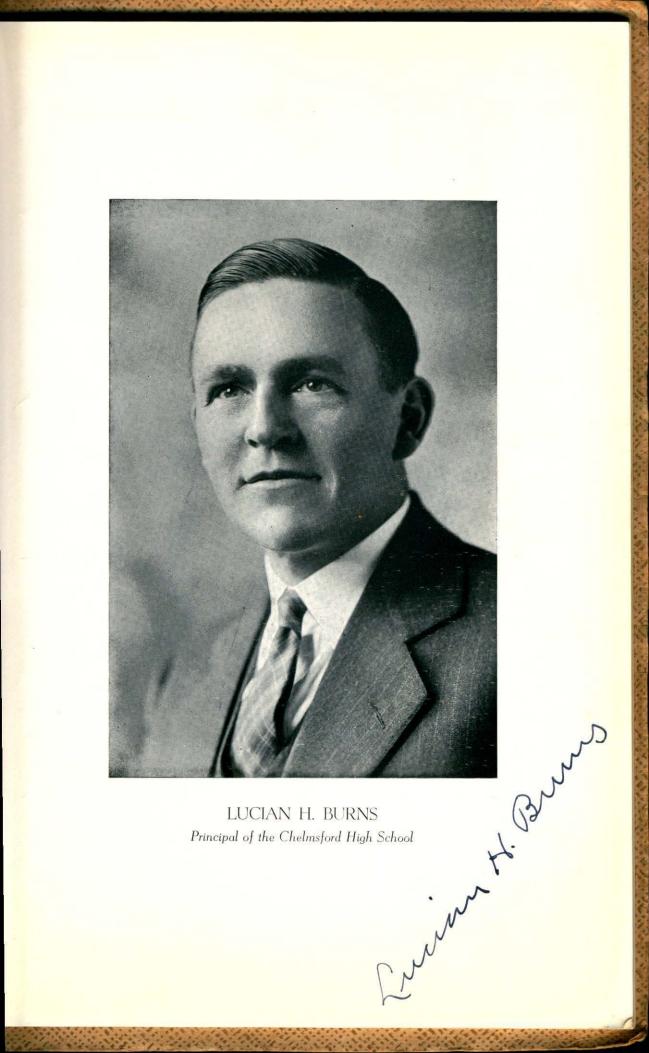

A true benefactor of the people chooses his profession with the spirit of service uppermost in his mind. A selfish person who thinks of his pay check first should not consider public service for his vocation because he is doomed to disappointment. The satisfaction of being useful during the greater part of one's life is the most important part of the remuneration of a public servant.

Some who become disgruntled because of their comparatively low salaries do not do their best while working for humanity. Others who hold their jobs because of politics and thereby feel secure, sometimes rest on that feeling of security and fail to do their duty. We have known people who, because of conceit and a wrong conception of their intelligence and importance, have been liabilities to their professions. There are those who loaf on their jobs while the boss is not there, thereby cheating themselves as well as the public of the valuable services they could render if they had the spirit of service in their hearts. The world and the professions these selfish people are hindering would be much better off without their halfhearted attempts to serve.

If you would be truly happy, choose a vocation of service, be honest with yourselves and the public you serve, and by your faithfulness and sincerity crowd out of the service professions those people whose selfish interests stand in their pathways of true success.

Sincerely yours,

Lucian H. Burns.

On human hearts the teacher works: 'Tis not by clever tricks or quirks That Education's task is done— The rich rewards of teaching won.

Who has the center of the stage? Not teacher or the printed page But boys and girls—some dull, some bright— Who need to learn life's lessons right.

Get wisdom—'tis a precious thing; Wide knowledge to the classroom bring. But use that wealth of mind and skill For what is more important still—

To teach young hearts and eager minds That virtue is the chain that binds Man to man; that high thoughts, right acts Are more important than cold facts;

That true success lies not in gain; That selfishness leaves e'er its stain; That each must do what e'er he can To aid the Brotherhood of Man.

So be the subject what it may, In quiet, unobtrusive way Teach one lesson by word and deed— That character is life's deep need.

The Indispensable Assets

The Class of 1937 is soon to face the annual problem of every graduating group; namely, finding employment, and, what is even more important, holding that job once it is gained. On the eve of Commencement, it would be well to consider some of the means by which both these ends may be attained.

The business world today is interested in one primary fact and that is to obtain the best personnel possible. They want the best because it is good business to have reliable, intelligent employees. Today, the employer has plenty of opportunity to get what he wants, for the supply of workers is much greater than the demand. He looks for certain indispensable qualities in every candidate for a position. These are intelligence, courtesy, neatness, and industry. Applicants possessing these will not have to wait long for their chance for the business world always has room for these assets.

Let us consider each of these separately. This intelligence does not necessarily mean book learning but rather the desire to improve and the ability to avoid previous errors. Intelligence is mandatory for lack of it means loss of money to a firm and a disruption of its organization. Ability to comprehend the particular problems of the business that you are in means success for you and for the firm.

Courtesy today is not as prevalent as in the past and fortunate is the applicant who possesses it. Courtesy brings friends and friends are the steps upon which you mount the ladder of life. No man is really self-made for without assistance his advance would be impossible. Courtesy brings cooperation from your superiors and consideration from your fellow-workers and without these you remain in a rut.

Neatness of appearance implies a like quality in your work. Two jobs may be equally well done but the neater will gain the greater consideration because of its appearance of workmanship. The person that is careful of his own possessions is generally careful of other people's property and that is what employers want.

Industry means a desire to work and to work well. Clock-watchers are their own worst enemies as those students who have tried to hasten a period by so doing have found out. Industry means doing extra work without any other hope of reward other than a job well done. The industrious worker soon attracts the attention of those who employ him and his chance comes all the sooner. A cheerful attitude while working helps tremendously and makes the day's labor less arduous.

These four are essentials without which no one can succeed. Read the lives of successful men and you will find that they all possessed these qualities to a high degree. Observe the failures in life and the lack of these four will be evident. If you have not attained them by now, then start immediately to acquire them, for no matter where you go or what you do the world will demand of you intelligence, courtesy, neatness, and industry. With them you can not help but succeed.

THE COURANT OF 1937

The most certain pleasures are those that lie in the past for they can never be taken away from us despite what the future may hold.

Realizing this fact to be true, it has been the custom for many years at the Chelmsford High School to record those events and happenings of the current school year in a volume known as "The Courant."

Its purpose is to aid the fallible memory by retaining in a permanent form the likeness and characters of one's classmates for the years to come.

If it thus serves the Class of 1937, it will have proven its worth and reward the efforts of the Board of Editors.

On the threshold of life we are ling'gring, While scanning school mem'ries held dear And the friendships which here have been strengthened By bonds that will e'er keep us near. Ambition is beck'ning us onward, With a hand that is steadfast and staunch; It will steer us o'er life's surging billows As forth to our future we launch.

Chelmsford High School—forever its mem'ry Inspires us to aim toward our goal With our motto of "Onward and Upward" Forever enshrined in our soul. Four short years spent within its broad portals, Have taught us those lessons of life Which, while facing the uncertain future, Will bear us through trouble and strife.

Now we leave you, our dear Alma Mater, With a handclasp that's true and sincere But our colors of purple and silver Will gleam brighter with each coming year. May the name of our classmates be written Some day in the great Hall of Fame; And our score may it be one that's numbered— The winners of life's happy game.

RUTH GORHAM

From the furnace of trial and sorrow there seems to emerge a purer spirit cleaned by the fires of adversity. Thus it has been with our classmate Ruth. Stricken by a dread illness, she has come forth braver, more determined and with a brighter light in her eyes that seems to reflect her bright heart within.

We stand in silent admiration for our Ruth and know that, with her misfortunes behind her, life will still have much to offer such a courageous character.

Meditation

The sun sinks slowly in the west, And darkness reigns o'er all,

This is the time that I love best, Sitting on the old sea wall.

Oft I'm sad as I sit and think, And oft again I'm glad.

And then I see the old moon wink, He knows when I'm sad or glad.

Then I think of the days gone by And ask: Have I done my best?

Oft have I shook my head and sighed: Could have done better, I guess.

I know it's an absurd feeling But e'en still, I feel so free That I really feel like kneeling

To thank God for making me.

But when the hour is over

I make my way up the shore, Sure to be back on the morrow,

To be sad or glad once more.

Athletics

Students and friends:

Are you a fan, I mean a real sports enthusiast? Do you love to see a long forward pass completed? Are you thrilled at an overtime basketball game? Do you get a kick out of a pitcher's battle? If so, then you are a fan. But if you answer "no" to the above questions, you need a blood transfusion. Furthermore, I'd like to have a second of your time.

During the past school year our athletic teams made enviable records. Our football team lost but one game. The baseball players made a brilliant showing. Chelmsford's basketball quintet fought hard despite inexperience. Our girls' team has always been good. Yet we had comparatively poor attendance records. This shows a lack of student interest.

Now in order to keep our athletic program on as high a plane as in the past, we need your support. You finance your teams through your athletic association dues. We collect little in gate receipts. If you back the team by going to the games, you are likely to influence others through your enthusiasm. Get behind the teams and boost our stocks. Attend the games.

Good teams deserve support. Poor teams need support.

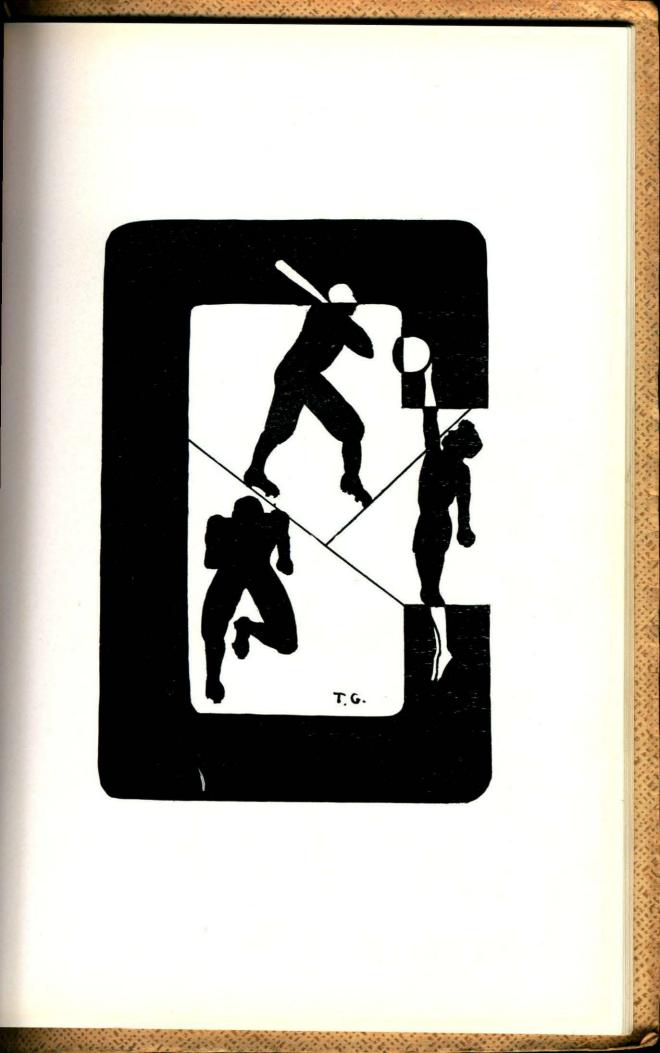

When our team awaits the opening blast from the referee's whistle announcing the start of another football season, let every fellow and girl enrolled in our school be on hand to lend support.

May all alumni enjoy a continued interest in our athletic endeavors. Keep tuned in.

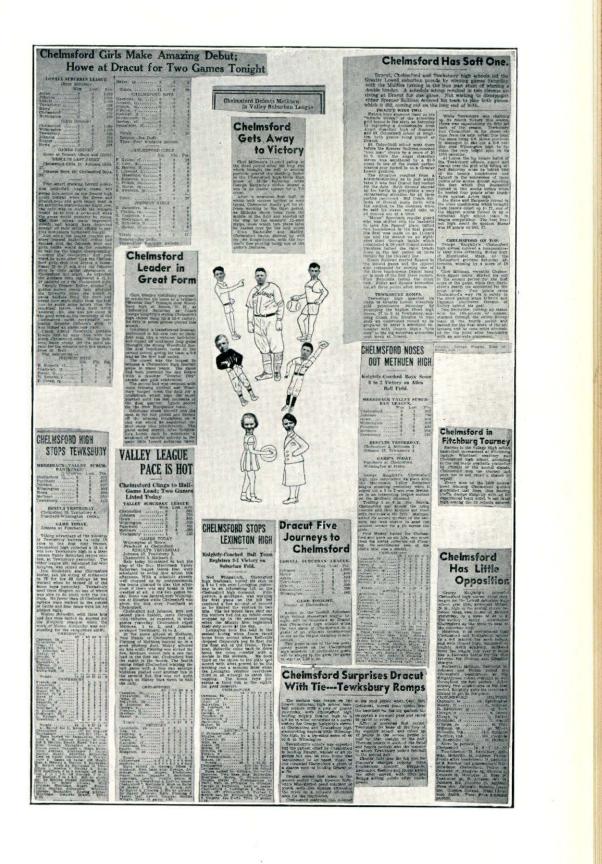

Good Sports, Everyone!

GEORGE R. KNIGHTLY, Coach.

Football

The powerful eleven fielded by our popular Coach Knightly last fall had folks thinking back many years to recall a more successful season than that of 1936. The only team to defeat Chelmsford during the entire season was the high geared Johnson High outfit.

The team was led by Capt. Gus Golubisky who was shifted from a tackle post to the backfield after George Matley's injury, and proved to be a hard driving halfback. Chelmsford won 6 games, tied 2 and lost one, the two ties being one with Tewksbury and the other a 6-6 deadlock with Dracut. This game turned out to be a great surprise as Dracut was rated as one of the best small school teams in Eastern Massachusetts.

Throughout the season, the punting and place-kicking of fullback Don Bachelder was outstanding while the ends were ably taken care of by Bill O'Brien and Nick Capuano. The quarterbacking was done by Chet Millman who reeled off many long runs during the course of the season. Walter Belleville and Capt. Gus Golubisky were the two hard running backs.

Next season's squad will be hard pressed for veterans since graduation this June claims nine of the eleven regulars who held down starting positions.

George Matley, halfback, is captain-elect.

Rose of sour and well a student guten student guten grow od und due gener (denetti) The Football Squad of '36

Come on, salute, all Chelmsford High! Let's give a rousing cheer!

Let's praise our team up to the sky. Our team that knew no fear.

The team that made the sidelines roar And classmates jump with glee,

The team that piled a mighty score The team that stood for victory.

Though many a strong opponent came To Chelmsford with high hope,

Though fight they did till sore and lame In vain attempt to cope.

And strong was Millis with record fine With brave and husky "guys"

Till the Chelmsford boys did cross the line And pulled the wool down over their eyes.

Through many a solid line it crashed. And many a team did sway and fall.

Till their spirits and hopes were dashed Against a sturdy Chelmsford wall.

Milford and Woodbury, all did yield, Acton, Howe, and Manchester too.

For when Gus and his men were on the field, Nobody knew just what they'd do.

How they did startle mighty Dracut Praised far and wide and high

How they did show that they could "take it," When they emerged from the mud with a tie.

But once alone were they turned down, The gallant red and blue.

For only Johnson gained the crown By doing what others could not do.

Let's cheer that team that gained success Let's cheer the team that brought us fame Salute that team of C. H. S.!

And may its memory 'ere remain.

Girls' Baskethall

Good spirit, hard work, and wholehearted cooperation characterized the practice sessions and games of the 1937 basket ball season. The games themselves were marked for their display of teamwork and good sportsmanship.

Aided by the clever passing of her forward court partner, Thelma Corr, Captain Frances Kelley garnered a total of 124 points during the season. At the other end of the basketball floor two more seniors, Rachel Burns and Barbara Swanson, occasionally assisted by the flashy sophomore, Cynthia Picken, played in an outstanding manner all season, proving themselves to be serious obstacles to the offensive game of Chelmsford's opponents. No small amount of credit for our successful season goes to "the best center court combination in the League, "Steph" Zabierek and Captain-elect Ethna Hazeltine.

After smiling favorably on Chelmsford until the last week of the season, Dame Fortune turned her back to us, snapping our drive toward the League Championship. For a second consecutive time we ended the season with a second-place standing in the Girl's division of the Lowell Suburban League

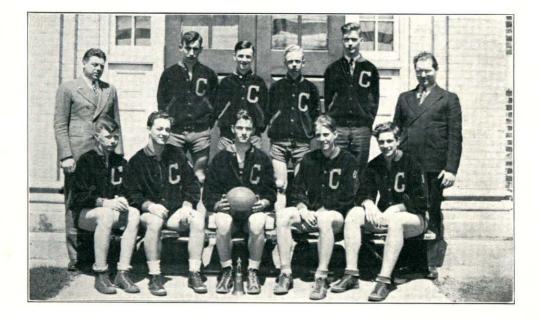

The season's record was a most creditable one for the girls and for Miss Hoffman who so faithfully and efficiently coached the girls in the technique of the game and the principles of sportsmanship.

Boys' Basketball

Green material greeted Coach George Knightly when he called his basketball cohorts to the fray. Only co-captains "Bill O'Brien and Ed Fletcher and Roy Clough had seen varsity service. Roy Johnson moved up from junior varsity. These four with Charlie Hazeltine and Ed Bettencourt bore the brunt of a hard season.

Our season's record, though not impressive or comparable to those of former years, had many interesting high-lights. We were pleased when our team got into the finals at the twelfth Annual Village High School Tournament at the Fitchburg Y.M.C.A. After two wins we were nosed out of the Class B Championship by Westford. Our school received a beautiful trophy and the squad members were presented basketball charms.

Baseball

After completing a football and a basketball season, it would seem by spring that Coach Knightly would have lost some of his energy and capacity for work. For-tunately for us he seems to have endless pep and enthusiasm. Thus, with the first sign of spring we welcomed his call for baseball candidates and rejoiced in the re-sults of his long and well organized practice periods which produced a heavy hitting, clever fielding baseball team.

Led by Captain Nick Capuano, the team offered fans a truly high brand of play throughout the season. Don Bachelder, powerful mound ace, compiled a bril-liant pitching record. In two successive games he fanned 38 opposing batsmen yielding but five scattered hits in each contest. Lowell sports writers hailed Bachelder as greater Lowell's 1937 pitching sensation while Bill King, Associated Press sports writer, termed him another "Bob Feller".

Roy Johnson, "Pete" Makey, Neil Fitzpatrick and "Toffy" Narus were others of our pitching staff who turned in excellent performances.

Edgar George, a fine receiver, did the catching. Walter Belleville did an ex-cellent job on first. Those two inseparables, "Ed" Desaulnier and "Del" Johnson made a great keystone pair. Nick Capuano is an all-round star.

Out in the field Ed Fletcher, "Zoke" Fuller, "Bud" Olsen and Tim Sheehan patrolled in big league fashion. And could Olsen hit? Wow!

Those who helped make our team what the record shows were substitutes: Warren Taylor, Paul Beauregard, Bill O'Brien, John Petterson, Russ Butterfield and Charlie Hazeltine.

Bill Golubisky was senior manager.

Why is Chelmsford High School able to produce such well equipped teams? The answer is the Athletic Association.

The A.A., which has the largest membership of all the clubs, supports the sports of C. H. S. not only financially, but morally does it stand behind the teams to urge them on.

Its success is largely due to the endeavors of the faculty manager, Mr. Budnick and to Mr. Watt who so ably took over the leadership during his absence.

Due credit and appreciation of their untiring efforts cannot be duly expressed to Miss Hoffman and Mr. Knightly, the coaches of the girls' and boys' various teams, who taught not only the principles of the game but good sportsmanship likewise.

To the rest of the faculty and the student body thanks is given for their cooperation and exhibition of the well-known "Chelmsford Spirit."

The A.A. is pleased to congratulate the following members who have earned awards in the various sports of the 1936-1937 season:

BARBARA GOODWIN BETTY JOHNSON EUNICE HOUSE FRANCES KELLEY LORRAINE FORGAYS MRS. MAE LEWIS

As in previous years, the Senior girls have united and formed a High Club. This association, under the careful supervision of the school nurse, Mrs. Mae Lewis, greatly contributed towards the moral, educational, and social lives of its members.

Due to a serious malady at the Tewksbury Institution, the club was unable to make its annual visit there.

The season proved very enjoyable and owes its success to the kind consideration of Mrs. Lewis, and to the cooperation of the members.

The toot of a horn! the tinkling of a piano, the squawk of a fiddle, followed by the sharp rap of a baton!

Thus a rehearsal of the C. H. S. orchestra gets underway every Monday in Room 10. Though one can scarcely hope to hear strains of Mozart's symphonies or the rhapsodies of the great masters, less difficult compositions have been practised faithfully. Each instrument is skillfully manipulated by its youthful player.

Despite the fact that the orchestra lacks a wide variety of instruments, satisfactory results have been obtained under the efficient leadership of Miss Charlotte Hyde.

The orchestra has assisted at various school functions and those who have seen and heard it enthusiastically declare that it has grown bigger and better than ever before.

Debating Society

Debators, Edward Desaulnier, Margaret Kerrigan, Mary Kinch, Walter Polley Chairmen, William Golubisky, Cynthia Speed Adviser, John J. MacLaughlan

Two debates were held this year before the P. T. A.'s of both the Center and North. The topic was Resolved: "That Capitol Punishment Should be Abolished".

The affirmative was upheld by Ed. Desaulnier and Walter Polley while the negative was presented by Margaret Kerrigan and Mary Kinch. The chairmen were Cynthia Speed in the Center and William Golubisky in North.

The debaters were coached by Mr. MacLaughlan who expects a great season next year with only one veteran speaker graduating.

Operetta

Spanish senoritas—intoxicating rhythm of Castanets and tamborines —the odor of sweet, ripening grapes—gypsy tangos—MELODY.

All these things, silhouetted against a romantic Spanish background, were very beautiful indeed. With such a picture and a cast of merryfaced songsters, "The Lost Necklace" opened its Chelmsford premiere in the Center Town Hall. The story connected with this operetta is that of a beautiful American miss, ably portrayed by Ethna Hazeltine, who loses her cherished necklace while visiting the Spanish vineyards and enjoying a siesta with the melodious grape-gatherers and colorful Zingara gypsies. In despair, she accuses the gypsies of having stolen it but later a member of the group finds the necklace and all is well again.

Miss Hyde as Lola gave a fine performance as did also Norma Wiggin as Inez, Harriet Ford as Dolores, Eleanor Pearson as Zerlina, and Louise O'Brien as Esmeralda. These soloists sang songs characteristic to their races and customs and were most efficiently aided by the chorus. A dance by Cynthia Picken, a gypsy, was artistically done and the other folk dances revealed the gracefulness of the youthful actresses.

THE COURANT OF 1937

Big Hearted Herbert

Whenever there is a good play, a good cast, and a good coach, there is bound to be an excellent production.

The Senior Play of '37 had each of these essential factors and those of us who have witnessed the performance have been captivated from the time of the opening to the time of its grand climax.

The story, laid against a cozy and "folky" background, concerns a self-made manufacturer who insists on simple living and who does not see why his only daughter must marry a Harvard man, or why his oldest son must go to college. Herbert, the grumbling business man, undergoes one nervous prostration after another. First he drops in on some invited guests in his shirt sleeves, next discovers a portrait of his cherished father removed from view, and finally explodes when he learns of the announcement of his daughter's marriage without his previous knowledge. Through the tact of his wife he is eventually cooled down and is made to realize the present mode of living of other people.

John Hill in the role of Herbert, the father, gave a superb performance in which he shows how angry an angry man can get. Barbara Goodwin, as Elizabeth, revealed with great efficiency the anxiety of the wife who had to "bear the brunt." Pauline Lundberg and William Hill (Alice and Andy) proved to be ideal lovers and each embracing scene was polished to perfec-Paul Laferriere and William Hines were the sons of the family. tion. Junior and Robert (who had a weakness for bananas) were the providers of humor as was also Stephanie Zabierek, the saucy maid, Martha, who had her eye on Andy as well as the coffee on the breakfast table. Helen Mills and Millis Pelton promenaded under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich, parents of Andy, and the prospective in-laws. Shirley MacLean and Murtaugh Borrows were the Amy and Jim who did not occupy a high position in the estimation of Herbert. Last, but not least, Dorothy LeClair and Archie Hulick as Mr. and Mrs. Havens, the guests at the fatal dinner which caused Herbert to topple from his high horse of family traditions.

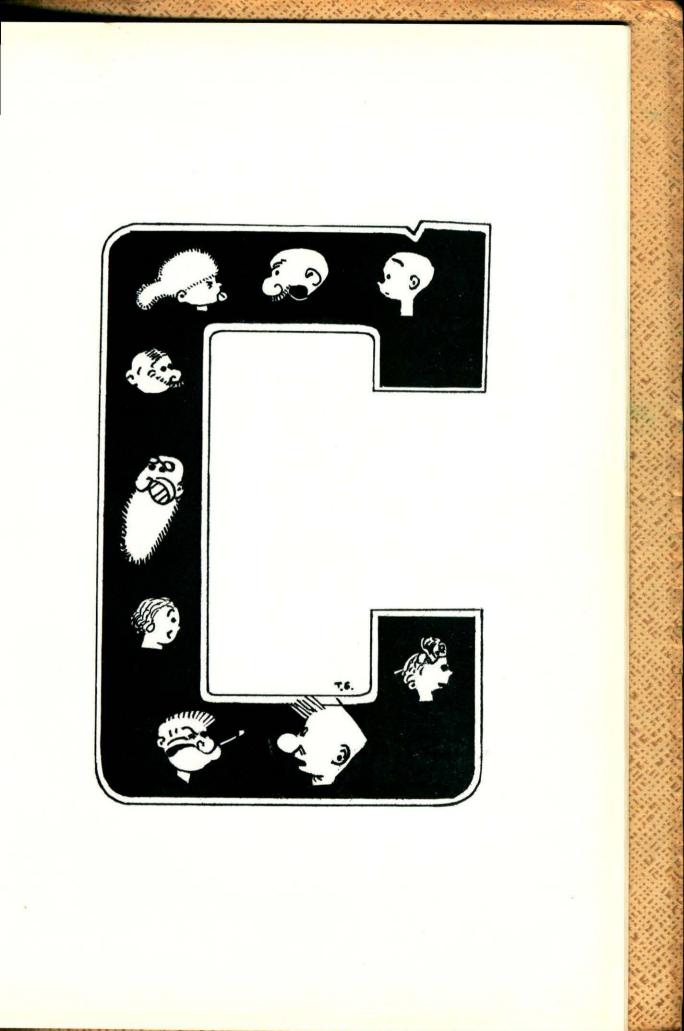

The fast moving comedy, stocked with laughs and expertly coached by Miss Grace Healey, is worthy of great praise and rivals any "Maytime" or "San Francisco" that ever graced the screen.

Prophecy

After studying Virgil's Aeneid for five or six hours, ahem, I was so full of Latin that I never wanted to see a Latin book again.

When I went to bed that night, I began to think of the Sibyl Cumaean, one of the Prophetesses of Apollo. As I thought of her I seemed to be going farther, and farther away from home, and then, lo and behold! I stood in front of the Cumaean cave.

Then I saw the Sibyl, and bowing, I asked her if she would grant me the favor of telling me about the future of this year's senior class. She informed me she would but that she would rather tell about them than picture them.

Then she seemed to get stiff and her face reddened and the story began—

"I see first a great war with all nations engaged in a bitter struggle. General Norman Bickford is supervising things for the C. H. S. Army. His assistants, Eric Johnson, Ray Lantagne, are of no assistance to their great general. Instead of covering themselves with glory in this war, Joe O'Neil, Arnold Saunders, Wilbur Ferron are covering themselves with mud, although Joe is pitching for his company's team, the other two are just pitching hay for the horses. Big Norman Wright, romantic Bill Hines, and bashful Bill Bray are among the injured resting comfortably in the Wekillem Hospital. Blissful Doris Foote, enchanting Alix Marinel, fiery Dot Lewis, Phoebe Murphy, Hope Fielding are their nurses. Archie Hulick and Paul Laferriere are their very efficient doctors. Millis Pelton and Buddy Olsen are aviators. Shortly Bill O'Brien forgets he is in a war and not a football game and runs out and catches a large hand grenade—. "Windy" Batchelder is ever faithful to the colors, trying to forget a certain blonde who "done him wrong."

Back in the U. S. A. quiet Tim Sheehan, who was picked up by major league scouts and shattered Babe Ruth's home run record, is now the leading sports scribe in the country. 198 lb. Lillian Rich, and tall, lanky Stephanie Zabierek are his very efficient helpers. Jim Birtwell is editor of the N. Y. Julloclirt paper. Florence Kelley, the deep voiced girl is the society editor. Ed O'Neil is the comic page editor. Gert McNulty and Anna Mello, the two night life girls, are the editors of the woman's page.

"Next I see," continued the Sibyl, "the Old Ladies' Home. The oldest member of the home is big 200 lb. Betty Johnson. Dagny Kropp is also one of the more prominent members of the home. Pauline Lundberg is the surprise of the day, I see her knitting in her old rocking chair, mumbling, "Why didn't I accept that first offer?"

Looking out of the dear old ladies' windows, a brightly lighted sign "Pope's Popular Paradise," could be seen. Inside, industrious Mildred Pope, the owner, was presenting an entertainment which was pleasing the crowd. Barbara Goodwin is doing a ballet dance, while fair Aurelia Sousa accompanied her on the piano. Among the prominent people seated at the tables was the "mayoress" of the city, dark eyed Lorraine Forgays and willowy Anna Stanchfield, her able right hand "man." Just cleaning up the water which sedate "Joe" Brennan spilled, while gazing around to see who was there, was tall, blonde Althea Gorham, the waitress. Clarrisa Putnam, the society leader, is at another table telling starry-eyed Gertrude Shepherd what she would have done if she had been in Mrs. Wally Simpson's place. Our attention is again turned to the stage, where diminuative Eunice House and Shirley Butterfield, dressed as two little school girls, recall tender memories, as they sing "Strolling On The Campus of C. H. S."

In a nearby dress shop owned by the Parisian stylist, Mildred Burton, petite Gena Pettazoni is being dressed in white satin and orange blossoms. Auburn-haired Betty Olsson, a famous dressmaker is fitting the gown. Grave and serious Helen Mills, the latest addition to the minister's profession, is rehearsing the wedding ceremony, while Esther Smith, a bridesmaid, is standing near a mirror, fussing about the shade of her dress, which she says isn't becoming to her. In another part of the store, boisterous Esther Angus is trying to sell a sport dress to Loretta Archibald for her to wear on the ship next time she goes abroad.

On the shore of a well-known beach was seen a modern novelty ship. Blonde, stalwart Dot LeClaire was trying to interest some of the bathers, Hazel Davis, and Helen Fadden, in a contraption which was supposed to keep them from sinking. Under a large beach umbrella, so she wouldn't get the least bit of sunburn was Katherine Trubey. In the water, nymphlike Emily Santos was teaching Eugenia Kisley, an old-maid school teacher, trying the water for the first time, how to swim. While from a nearby diving board, the Olympic star, Evelyn Peterson, was demonstrating a swan dive.

Tiny Don Bachelder is driving an electric car to a big football game between Gus' Eleven and Kras' Sloppy team. Gus Golubisky is the water boy for Gus' Eleven and Magan Krasnecki is the owner of the other high powered outfit. Going to the game, efficient, Bill Hill is accompanied by his tall secretary, Clara Corr. Leon Shugrue is covering the game (not with a blanket) for the North Chelmsford Bla. Nick Capuano, the peanut vendor, is selling his stock here. Next is "Question Box" Rachel Burns who sits in a box all by herself so that she can enjoy the game. Vivacious Thelma Corr, the beauty expert, is also present.

The game is about to start and looking around we see silent Walter Bellville, the great tractor magnate, who invented a tractor of 22 speeds with the help of mechanics, pale Peter Makey and diminutive Frank Woodhead. His chauffeur, Carl Brown, has just cavorted into the part with the referee, "Hush-up" Walter Polley.

Down the street five blocks, a teachers convention, or "kids' holiday," is in progress. Chet Millman, the quiet chairman, is just calling the meeting to order. Mary Scollan and harsh Edith Alcorn from the Cowlot Grammar School have just entered. Dot Jones, local supervisor of music, leads the singing. Nedra Sleeper, the great artist, is also present. Shieky Pete Borrows is hanging around hoping to get a date with one of the 1000 teachers at the convention. Dynamic Frances Kelley and tiny Barbara Swanson, two athletic teachers, are at the convention.

Coming around the corner in a nice car borrowed by vigorous Charlton Boyd, is a group of men who have just graduated from college after 10 years of struggling. Brief Jack Hill, and grinning John Brotz are members. Roy Clough, the boy who thought he was Tarzan, has changed his views after a battle with blonde Dick Pearson. Smooth John Calder has just finished the aviators' course.

Close behind them is thin and strong arm Edgar George, riding on a motorcycle watching the speedsters. At home the wife, (S. M.?) is working very hard as Edgar has been giving the orders for a change."

Suddenly coming out of her trance as quickly as she went into it, the Sibyl became natural again and she spoke to me, "As most of my predictions are wrong, I think this one will be no exception."

Chatter in the Girls' Locker Room

(At lunch time)

The "25 minute of" bell has just rung. Girls—pouring in and out of the inadequate doorway. Shouts—"Ow," "Hey, wait for me," "Well, hurry up! I'm hungry.'

Now some are gone. Many remain to eat in the lockerroom. The room full of chatter, laughter, giggling, exclamations, "Oh, did he really say that?" "Oh, Lizzie, where do you think I saw you last night?" "It's a wonder they don't get laryngitis or something."

About ten minutes of twelve. Girls, coming in from outside, from the lunchroom, stopping to buy candy-"Have you got what I want?" Now more noise than ever. Girls, combing their hair, applying lipstick, powder-ing. More chatter, "Oh, Look, another run!" "Oh, my hair is a mess! Mary, can I borrow your comb? Where is my lipstick gone? Louise, you had it, didn't you?"

The beil rings. "Goodnight! Is that the last bell?" "Somebody brush me off. I got powder all over me." A scramble for the doorway and the stairs. At last they are all out and silence reigns till two fifteen.
